Abstract
OBJECTIVE
To create a standard operating procedure to identify and correct plagiarism based on the existing practices of high impact medical and scientific journals, professional societies, and editorial practices.

RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS
A comprehensive review of plagiarism policies, protocols, and identification methods was used by those organizations to highlight the best practices of each.

RESULTS
While plagiarism remains an ongoing moral and ethical concern in the medical and scientific community, its impact has led to the redaction of scientific research and charges of misconduct. The CONsolidated Standards of Reporting Trials (CONSORT) and the Online Journal of恭喜错误，请检查后重试。
